

EQUIPMENT roll out

SUNGLASSES for sand & snow

Looking good while protecting your eyes.

Recommendations by SKImag.com

Bolle Men's Jude

The new Judes are a fresh twist on style most brands have. With an argyle print on the inside and color that shows a bit when you have them on, the Jude exudes fun and a little bit of hipster while keeping it classy. [$120]

Zeal Men's Tracker

These Trackers wrap around your face more than many lifestyle-only shades, and they'll stay on your face while at the local bike park, but you won't get second looks if you wear them to a BBQ. [$120]

Oakley Men's Holbrook LX

This Shaun-White designed style, the "luxury" version, is made from acetate giving the frames a higher end feel. The Holbrook LXs provide great sun protection and are the right size and shape for medium faces. [$220]

Spy Men's Cyrus

New this spring, these Cyrus glasses have fairly large lenses, a thick, solid frame, and earpieces—making them ideal for large faces. We like the childish yet steezy Cherry Bomb frames. [$120]

Smith Women's Mt. Shasta

These Mt. Shastas are lightweight, low-profile and designed to look good. Thin frames add to a retro look that you'll be able to rock these all year, whether at a summer festival or at a slopeside hot tub. [$80]

Serengeti Women's Sophie

These Sophies are expensive, great quality and ridiculously good looking. They have spring hinges for a custom fit, and are made of acetate which gives the frames a higher-end feel and allows for endless color/style options. [$290]

Zeal Women's Memphis

These biodegradable, ecologically-sourced frames are made entirely from cotton, which means they're lightweight, durable, and you can feel good about wearing them. Fits best on people who have small-to-med-sized faces. [$170]

Spy Women's Quinn

With a look that's reminiscent of the '60s and '70s, the new Quinns have a frame size that'll fit, flatter, and stay on a variety of faces. The frames are made with the same lightweight plastic as many ski touring boots. [$110]

Church & State Women's

These Catwalk-Kate brightly colored tortoise sunnies have a good amount of flex and the earpieces are shorter than many other sunglasses, perhaps making the shades best suited for small to medium faces. [$150] ■